OTTAWA RECRUITS SAVE KENORA

Stanley Cup Holders Win League With Help of Ottawa Forwards.

Kenora, March 12.—A crowd packed the rink to witness the match between the Kenora Thistles, a central team bringing a large contingent from Portage and Winnipeg. The Thistles effected a victory in the first period, but the Portage Stanley Cup aspirants, while not so good as Friday's game in Brandon, tonight's game was hockey of the fastest order. Though the Thistles excelled all the way, Portage fought back the home team's goal and anxious to give, at half time the score stood 3 to 0 in favor of Kenora, and in the second half they added four more, making a final score of seven to nil.

Council Favors Granting $50,000 For New Hospital

By-Law Will be Submitted to Ratepayers for Ratification After Meeting on Thursday—Proposed New Building Will Cost $150,000.

The request of the board of directors of the Public Hospital for a grant of $50,000 toward the erection of a new hospital building, which will adequately meet the demands of Kenora, was considered at the meeting of the council last night. The request is for the acquisition of a suitable site and the erection of a building to accommodate the patients of the hospital. The request was made by Mr. Short, president of the board, who stated that the council had already decided upon the site and the plan of the building. He stated that the council had also decided to purchase the site and to erect the building. He stated that the council had also decided to purchase the site and to erect the building.

MR. SHORT'S PRESENTS CASE
 The request of the hospital directors which has already been published in the Bulletin, was read, and a motion made to hear Mr. Short, the representative of the board.
 "The Public Hospital directors," the harriest support and sympathy of the entire city," Mr. Short said, "Edmonton has an immense floating population. Many men who come here are here and when they fall victims to illness are without the kindly attention of the hospital. There will be an increase in this population in consequence of railway and other construction work this year. Already this element is large and there is an alarming amount of illness among them. The hospital at present can accommodate only 30. The capacity of the hospital is now taxed to its utmost. Fewer many patients are refused admission. For instance in one day last week six patients were refused, and are now waiting for admission. Take two weeks as an average length of time a patient remains in the hospital, you will see that there is a demand for 180 patients."

CONDITIONS COULD NOT BE WORSE
 "It may even go so far as to say men are dying as a result of the lack of accommodation. The death of Robert Todd, which occurred on Monday night was unquestionably due to his being unable to get treatment until it was too late."

THE PLANS PRESENTED
 The plan of the proposed new building which were secured by competition were shown to the aldermen. Mr. Short declared the new building would be economical and efficient, and would be a credit to the city. He believed the people of Edmonton would endorse the project.

THE NEW BUILDING
 The new building would be located on a site on Jasper Avenue, overlooking the valley of the river. The property had been purchased from the Edmonton City Co. The capacity of the new hospital was 118 beds, and the estimated cost, per bed, about $180. The board expected, however, that before the building was completed it would run into $125,000. It was the intention to raise $50,000 or $60,000 by public subscription in addition to the $50,000 which it was confidently expected the city would vote.

WILL BE REPRESENTED
 Mr. Short stated that the city council would have representation on the hospital board of directors. It was with the province of this body to say no woman members there should be. ALDERMAN WALKER IN FAVOR
 Alderman Walker moved that a by-law be submitted to the ratepayers, to the effect that the city should erect adequate accommodation for patients of the sick of the city.

ALDERMAN WALKER'S MOTION
 Alderman Walker, who moved that a by-law be submitted to the ratepayers, to the effect that the city should erect adequate accommodation for patients of the sick of the city. He stated that the city council would have representation on the hospital board of directors. It was with the province of this body to say no woman members there should be. ALDERMAN WALKER IN FAVOR
 Alderman Walker moved that a by-law be submitted to the ratepayers, to the effect that the city should erect adequate accommodation for patients of the sick of the city.

ALD. REARD OPPOSED
 Alderman Reard, who opposed to submitting the by-law, moved that the request be referred to the commissioners for a report.

He drew the attention of the council to the fact that many of the patients were from the surrounding country, and he did not think it was the duty of the city to provide a home for the homeless, indifferently. The granting of the $50,000 would be a bonus. There was no possibility of any revenue being derived from the institution. Finally he said and would continue to do so much as any man of common sense would do.

WHY THE CHANGE
 Alderman Daily considered the object a worthy one. He felt sorry on the subject because he had had some personal experience, as to the inconvenience which the lack of accommodation caused. A city's greatest asset was its people.

ALD. GARRIE'S REPORT
 There was a question as to whether Garvey's mind but that the city would not be able to handle the situation. There were two other institutions of a similar character, in the city, he said. The Public Hospital had been in existence for ten or twelve years. The men had put up at a cost of $150,000, a building, which at the time of its erection, was greatly in advance of the then requirements. He did not know that either this or the University Hospital, were in need of assistance, but he wanted to inform himself on the subject.

His request was accepted to.

THE SALARIES RECOMMENDED

By Commissioners in the Departmentalization Scheme—Council not Prepared to Endorse it Immediately.

The commissioners' report presented at the city council meeting last night in reference to departmentalization, drew a significant raising of the eyebrows of a number of the aldermen. It was laid on the table for a week. It is as follows:

"To complete arrangements under department organization, we recommend the adoption of the following schedule of salaries, stating a definite minimum and maximum, in cases where it is frequently necessary to pay men in accordance with their ability or the available supply in their particular lines."

THE GOVERNMENT'S LAND POLICY.

The Mail and Empire has resurrected what it is pleased to call the Saskatchewan scandal. That is the sale in the year 1896 of 250,000 acres of land to the land company of that name at $1.00 an acre. The alleged scandal lies in the fact that the land which the government sold at $1.00 an acre is now worth from $5 to $10 an acre.

This fact may constitute a scandal in one of two ways:

(1) The government sold the land at less than its market value at the time the sale was made.

(2) The government is to be condemned because the land is now worth more than it was then.

As to the value of the land at date of sale, the best evidence that can be adduced is the price at which, shortly after, similar and contiguous land in like quantity was sold at the same time and to the same person.

The Saskatchewan Valley Land company purchased from the Regina, Qu'Appelle & Long Lake Railway company 250,000 acres of odd numbered sections, at the same time that they purchased from the government the 250,000 acres of even numbered sections in the same tract.

The land company paid the railway company $125 an acre for the land. On a new examination of prices, it would appear that the land company had an advantage in price of seventy cents an acre on the government land as against the railway land.

But the purchase from the government involved the placing of settlers in each township in a region where up to that time there had been no settlement, while the purchase from the railway company involved no obligation beyond the payment of the money. In view of this fact there can be no question that the purchase from the railway company was at a much better price to the land company than that from the government. The purchase from the government was made not because the price was better, but because it was necessary for the land company to secure the even numbered sections intervening between the odd numbered sections purchased from the railway company in order to carry out successfully the scheme of settlement by which they hoped to increase the value of the land purchased from the railway and the government, and to make a profit on the transaction.

If, under these circumstances the price at which the government sold is evidence of collusion with party friends to enable them to reap an illegitimate profit, what is to be said of the action of the directors of the Regina, Qu'Appelle & Long Lake Railway company, who sold the adjoining land at what to the purchaser was a lower price? Is this connection to be explained that one of the principal directors of the railway company making the sale was E. B. Oiler, M.P. for West Toronto, one of the leading financiers of Canada and one of the leading members of the party of the opposition.

If it was a scandalous transaction for Hon. Mr. Sifton, as minister of the interior, and trustee of the interests of the people of Canada, to sell to the Saskatchewan Valley Land company 250,000 acres of land at $1.00 an acre, with difficult and expensive settlement conditions, it must have been an equally scandalous transaction for E. B. Oiler, M.P., as director of the Regina, Qu'Appelle & Long Lake Railway company, to sell out the rights of the shareholders of that company to 250,000 acres of intervening and adjacent land at $125 an acre.

If the measure of the loss to the original holders of the land in both cases is the difference between the amount received by them and the present value, the argument of the Mail and Empire would seem to indicate, Mr. Oiler is responsible to the shareholders of the Regina, Qu'Appelle & Long Lake Railway company for several millions of dollars, of which he and his fellow directors were the means of depriving them.

But in all the blazes the Mail has kindled, and in all the discussions that have taken place in parliament, there has not been a whisper of criticism of the action or good faith of Mr. Oiler, and there should not be.

He sold the land at the best price he could get, at the time, and the subsequent increase in value is no reflection on the good judgment or good faith of Mr. Oiler. They only should that which is no reflection upon Mr. Oiler and his colleagues is a reflection upon Mr. Sifton and his colleagues.

As to the second point of possible criticism. Is the government to be condemned because the land included in the purchase of the Saskatchewan Valley Land company, from both the railway company and the government now costs more than it did five years ago? It costs more because it is in demand now, so it is worth more. It is in demand now because its capabilities and advantages are now known as they were not then. The purpose of the government had been to sell the Saskatchewan Valley Land company a demonstration of the capability and advantages of the area, in question, which if successful must necessarily result in an increase in value of the land. The attempt was absolutely successful. The land company at great expense bought in large numbers of settlers, who demonstrated the capabilities and advantages of the region. The expectations of the government that a large tract of hitherto uninhabited and unproductive country would become inhabited and productive, has been amply and satisfactorily realized. It having been demonstrated that land supposed to be unproductive is really very productive there necessarily follows an increase of price corresponding to the increase in known value.

There can be no doubt that the increase in the value of land in the tract in question and throughout the North-West, is very directly due first to the arrangement made with the land company in regard to that particular tract and second to the general policy of the government in regard to the North-West, which has resulted in a general increase of land values throughout that region.

It is contrary to the public good that North-West land has increased in price during the past five or ten years, and the government must plead guilty to the charge of having deliberately shaped their policy and conducted their negotiations with a view to securing the settlement of the country, and to its being made profitable, with a full knowledge of the fact that an increase in the value of land must follow the success of such a policy.

If the people object to the results of the present Government's policy of western development they have a ready remedy. They can force the party supported by the Mail, carrying out the western policy of that party when in power—the same policy still advocated by the Mail and by the leaders of the party themselves in Parliament—and over will be no doubt of an increase in the price of land. It may be the best of that party at the end of eighteen years of its administration land could be bought at lower prices in both Eastern and Western Canada than at its beginning.

If that is what the people of Canada want they know where to vote and how to get it. Or, if they had lost sight of the fact the Mail, in its criticisms of the Government's western policy and administration, is doing its best to remind them—Montreal Herald.

ASSAILING RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT.

In an address recently delivered before the Canadian club in Ottawa Mr. J. W. Courtney, ex-Deputy Minister of Finance, endorsed the view that the conduct of the civil service should be left out of the hands of the Government and vested in an independent commission. A similar motion has been very frequently promulgated by the Opposition press of late and these organs quite naturally open the language of Mr. Courtney as a more than usually important consideration of their views.

That civil service consideration from the present system of appointing civil servants on the recommendation of members of Parliament is unquestionable. That the system should be changed with the party not in power is equally a natural. From the standpoint of the civil servants too it might seem to be an advantage to be shielded by a body which had no responsibility to the people.

But there is another view of the case and the really important view—the view from the public standpoint. This proposal amounts simply to an invitation that we should renounce the method of responsible government as a failure and the abandonment of our constitutional system of car government machinery in the hands of a body of men who have no responsibility to the public and no department to which with which the public has most direct, general and continuous contact.

If it be the business of a government to govern and if a government is to be held responsible for governing that government must surely be given control of the governing machinery. And of this machinery no part is so directly and fully under the scrutiny of the people as the civil service. The legislation, the policy and the general administration of a government are known to the public either in outline and general scope, the doings of the civil servants are daily and hourly under the observation of the people. The civil service officials are the men who represent the Government to the people every day, directly, and in detail.

In consequence it is from the civil service and civil servants that the public form daily their general impression of the satisfactory or unsatisfactory character of the administration of public affairs. It is a strange proposal, surely, that the Government should be deprived of the power of selecting the men who are to represent them thus continually before the electors, and for whom efficiency and integrity the electors are to hold them responsible.

The theory of responsible government is that the people are sovereign and that both the power to govern and the responsibility for governing should be placed absolutely in the hands of those to whom the people delegate their power. If any such proposal as was mooted were adopted neither the commission must be made responsible to the Government nor the Government relieved from all responsibility for the doing of the commission.

For the former case (if commission would not be independent) in the latter case responsible government would be abolished. And with its abolition would go the theory of responsible government. It is not more necessary

Historic Paardeburg-A Soldier's Story of Event

One of the First Canadian Contingent Says He Never Worked so Hard Before or Since as Digging the Trench That Night Within a Few Yards of the Boer Lines While Muzzers Croaked and Men Fell Limp
Seven Years Ago on Blood-Soaked, Battle Scarred
South African Veld.

In Edmontan and the surrounding district there are many men who, when their country called to arms, their guns and journeyed to far-off Africa to defend the honor of their flag and the peace of the world.

Perhaps the most noted of the contingents which went from Canada to South Africa was the Strathcona force, many of whom were from Edmontan, and all of whom were from the great Western country. Certain it is that no contingent did more valiant service for the Motherland than the Strathcona.

The work of the first contingents and the Strathcona force was not the same as that of the later contingents. The detachments which reached the scene of the battle only in time to witness the completion of the war. One of the soldiers himself tells graphically in the following article the story of the events which led up to Paardeburg and the winning of that historic battle.

Seven years ago last month Canadian volunteers were helping British regulars to draw forth from the lion of the Transvaal-General Kruger. Seven years ago a week past Wednesday the final battle was fought, and the advent of Dr. Roberts, the patient left for a health resort in the Atlantic, to recover from the effects of the operation.

The anniversary of Paardeburg? To some it is fought with sorrow, for only recall that the hopes of cherished sons and brothers mingle with the African soil.

To others it is chiefly reminiscent of physical pain, but to the majority of men of a time in their lives when they had the privilege of being present at the making of dramatic history.

I can forget the blistering days and stifling nights; the sun's rays of fire and the curving line of the Mafeking along the banks of the Orange and rugged Boers dug for protection in the face of a merciless bombardment from machine guns and rifles. I feel, indeed, can forget that baptism of fire at the first general action, where the casualties numbered thirteen hundred, and where some of the Boers in the badge of the Maple Leaf.

Paardeburg was part siege, part battle, and it was in the latter that the Boer leader's force of four thousand threw up fortifications along the high banks of the stream and settled down to resist the arrival of reinforcements.

Then, British helicopters twined, British cavalry horses were ridden to death, and British infantry lived on exhausted and hard luck. All that was that something of supreme importance was impending. But to ask a question was to face, by way of reply, another query.

It was potent that a great movement was in progress. The exact why or wherefore, though, that's where the shoe pinched. Although at the front, the rank and file knew less than the leaders of the great despatches thousands of miles away.

Heavy columns plodded forward, cavalry jolted past, batteries lumbered along, cars and mules strained under the load of heavy transport teamsters. Rumors flew. Several hundred men, arms, and shoulders ached under the rifle's weight.

Cronje was being pursued, Cronje had joined up. We, Cronje was making a last stand, Cronje's men had notified, Cronje was fighting for his life—none was positive as to what was just happening, but all were agreed that General Cronje was a very busy man.

The after-surrender, if somewhat otherwise, was accurate. The doughy chief was here. He was handling a large order. He was trying to shoot a black flag that rolled across the Mafeking plain from sun to sun. He was treated, yes, game. Though with a sinister, an almost black reputation, edition of the Boer general was openly expressed as the day went along. The burghers were stubborn to the verge of madness. Their position was ringed around with cannon.

Breiveldt hung a balloon. In it were men with field-glasses who signalled the advance of what was taking place in the enemy's laager.

On For Mother's Cooking!

There were the survivors of many brigades. Miles away were signals of cavalry to look back and find possible retreats. On the far, rounded summit of distant peaks were post-horn detectors. Moments to watch for the appearance of hostile troops.

It was no fortune to spend a couple of days and nights on these isolated hills.

We christened it Starvation Kopje. The hill of fear was not compelling. We were hungry and profane. There was one youth who seemed to find deep gratification in referring to his mother's excellence as a cook. I never doubted him, but his confidential situation for juicy steaks, meaty potatoes, frothy coffee, deep sleep, and honey and had not been so peculiarly irritating. He became unpopular.

But if audience was practically eliminated, the view from the hill's bleak crest was exhilarating.

Under a sky of deepest blue, flecked with clouds of fire, the valley below was a vast stretch of apparently endless de la coupe. It had the vastness of the ocean. Here and there levelled, or cone-shaped kopjes, dotted in violet haze, dotted the great spaces. The winding course of the Modder could be traced, but one's gaze would be led to the clump of sickly trees in a loop of the river, where men battled, against desperate odds.

There would be intervals between the bombardments, but the moving silence seemed more ominous than the crackling of artillery.

Now then came an opportunity given for the holding of an armistice. The Boers offered to surrender, but with demand and unless complied, the burghers refused and close to their camp. Then came a reconnaissance of a period of destruction. The Boers had burned down the last of the last, it was difficult to convince oneself that life could continue, as shell after shell from the steel throats out on the plain whistled late the position. The first was plunged, the banks seared by the fire of the Boers. The second was not a general attack, yet there was no doubt of a general attack. The third, the 27th, was a wholesale day from the weather point of view. The afternoon was gray, with occasional glimmers of sunshine. Darkness fell with the quickness common to the climate.

Off to the Firing Line. Our regiment had received orders, and we were expected to carry them out without question and without question to conjunction with the other battalions of the brigade, the Gordon Highlanders, the Overalls and the Strathcona, as we were to advance, under cover of the night, against one of the important Boer positions, dig a trench, occupy it, and await further instructions. It was felt that such a course would render the nearest Boer trench untenable, and that the movement would bring to a consummation the long-drawn struggle.

How little incident there is in our story! The regiment, behind the field hospital, stood off one for a growth of low brush along the river bank. Present we received permission to sit down to—occasionally, you would hear the crack of a bullet, seemingly fired at random from the enemy's position. We were fatigued to command of any length or the undertaking which had been entrusted to us. In my section, a man sank against some shrubbery, and, curling up, fell asleep. A few yards away, or more, on the narrow shore, a few officers stood watching the larger army. We were fatigued to command of any length or the undertaking which had been entrusted to us. In my section, a man sank against some shrubbery, and, curling up, fell asleep. A few yards away, or more, on the narrow shore, a few officers stood watching the larger army.

The few who were not too tired to talk conversed in whispers. At last, after about half-an-hour by the river bank, we were ordered to move to the existing British trench, into which we silently filed. Almost as darkness came, the Boer position. The distance was perhaps two hundred yards. To find refuge in the trench was to endure a cramped posture, not within ten feet of an hour, after doubling up on the ground, it was, nonetheless, stifled and hot, and, at last, stiff and chilled.

The Final Advance. It was past midnight, starlight and frost. "Fall in!"

The order was whispered by the various section commanders along the line. There were two ranks, the front with bayonets fixed, and the rear with rifles slung, and every man carrying alternately a spade and pick. I was in the rear rank. There was the soft shuffling of many feet, the anxious staring into the blackness ahead, the occasional jerking of a pebble against a steelhead, and the eager but unheeded muttering of the men. I cannot clearly remember how long we stood there, but all seemed to be half-asleep, as if in a daze of weariness. A shuffling tip-toed down the line.

"For God's sake, don't talk out loud," was whispered. We stood resolute. Ahead there was a faint light. We were about to take a few more steps, when from the left, we heard a faint clatter. Someone had fallen against the wire strung on wire strung along the line.

Instantly, it seemed, a great part of the disturbance, there rang out a single shot. We flung ourselves to the bare ground as the glow from the left was split by a shining line of fire that lit up the wire and sent from end to end of the line.

A hail of bullets sang overhead. Again, there was the ripping streak of red light and the man on my right pitched forward. Shoulder, bullets were thudding the front—whizzing from an apparently insupportable source. From yellow, the lighting changed to independent firing, but at least half an hour the Boers were working incessantly.

But that half hour was well utilized by those who lay exposed, and the enemy was slain. The enemy trench was hardly forty yards distant, and the only cover between us was a device stone. It required more courage to crawl behind the breast than to remain in the open, where the surroundings were so dangerous, were less un-certain.

Digging For Dear Life.

That half hour was occupied in digging. Personally, I was more concerned with that particular form of labor, than with answering the Boer shots. I crept myself exclusively to it. I dug with hands and knees. I had no gun, and I was not allowed to use any such wheeled device, with which such work is done. I had no gun, and I was not allowed to use any such wheeled device, with which such work is done.

With the coming of the trader South from dawn, the trench, though rough and crude, was completed. Inside crowded men, their rifles wavering over the heads of fresh dug earth. A few yards down the trench lay a private to have been shot in the stomach. He was writhing—that was all. In front lay scattered a half dozen or so still forms. Once he was one, the mud was wet, and over the body swarmed a myriad ants. The tension was almost to bursting point. Someone, with a husky laugh, mentioned "sacred charge." Both sides waited and watched. Presently a rag fluttered above the opposite trench.

A voice yelled: "They are coming in—coming in!"

Then, a man appeared below the rag, and next, a man dragged himself out of the trench, and with the combatant under held aloft, walked forward a few feet and halted. He looked like a needy man or looker. He seemed uncertain as to his reception, but by this time, practical assurance was given that the signal was comprehended and the Boers were won.

A few hours later, a detachment was sent over the ground to gather up the loot, pick, spade, bottle and gun, which were dropped during the confusion of the trench.

We were busy, when a dapper little man on horseback, riding in advance

INTERMEDIATES GET THE MEDALS

Lead the City Championship by Trimming Helmicks 3-1 Last Night—Game was Rather Poor Sample of Hockey.

The final game in the somewhat lengthy city league series was played last night at the rink between the intermediates and the ten "Tiger-Moraine" media, who pulled out a win over the Helmicks by 3-1, with a 4-2 show at half time.

The display of hockey was hardly of the quarter variety and had hardly a redeeming feature in the first half. The winners' inability to show in the opening round was due somewhat to the fact that Clarke was rather used up after Monday night's clash with the Hawks, and Banford's line failed to come right against the financial crowd and with the seniors after a strenuous game.

The winners have the best team and with the lineup in shape would have rolled up a much larger score. Their scoring department on the whole is poor, but better stick hands and play better together. On the defense, though, it was three to one and quarter, and the Helmicks were the better. Twenty minute halves were played and in the initial round the Hawks' possession a great deal of the time, but the only man who could handle the puck was Douglass. It is stated by a gentleman closely in touch with the Hawks' management that if the Hawks had made to Smith by the Thistle to finish off the game, the Hawks would have won. The terms are said to be very satisfactory and the Hawks' management have practically finished their season.

With Alf Smith on the Thistle team a rearrangement of the forward line would be necessary. With Tom Phillips and Smith on the wing, Banford would likely be moved over to centre and the position of Banford would be in front of the game. Banford, with his great speed, should be able to hold down the rover position and Fred Whitehead would step to centre. Tom Hooper is right again and will likely be played as a rover, where he started the season.

HOMER FOR OLD BALL PLAYERS.

His League Power in Election and American Association Will Donate

August Hermann, chairman of the national board, is now working out a plan for the election of old ball players in the district. The members of both leagues seem favorable to the idea. The first election will be held at a fund of several hundred thousand dollars can be raised in a year, as the lovers of the sport will take enthusiasm to the idea. The first election will be held at a fund of several hundred thousand dollars can be raised in a year, as the lovers of the sport will take enthusiasm to the idea. The first election will be held at a fund of several hundred thousand dollars can be raised in a year, as the lovers of the sport will take enthusiasm to the idea.

This announcement will be hailed with applause by some of the petriarchs. Manager Thorne is bringing to Calgary, (the same) the first election will be held at a fund of several hundred thousand dollars can be raised in a year, as the lovers of the sport will take enthusiasm to the idea.

MINISTERS AND SPORT.

(Staff Reformer.) By what ethics of religion should a clergyman be compelled to isolate himself from any sports? The what grounds should a man, when he enters the ministry, be bound to give up all sports? The what grounds should a man, when he enters the ministry, be bound to give up all sports?

There is a case in point of a young clergyman holding the position of pastor of a congregation in a city. During his college days he actively engaged in sports, and became champion in one of the hardest of games. When he became pastor of his present church his interest in sports did not flag, but he at once threw himself enthusiastically into the encouragement of many sports in his adopted town.

Condemnation of his action has become pronounced as to cause unpleasantness between the pastor and some of his flock.

Why should it be so? Is the Church so exclusive a club that it must shut out all things outside its immediate precincts as being too worldly to be associated with, or to use its influence upon?

The trouble with the Church is that it is allowing the door to be open to the world in many of the things that are considered by the "unconquered" as too worldly.

The Church takes too little interest in the things of the world. It is not a church of the world, but a church of the world.

If the Church will not tolerate secular Christianity, it must not tolerate the things of the world. It is not a church of the world, but a church of the world.

Philips Jack (Chabrows) has formally offered the New York American club to resign of his permanent retirement from football.

It is all but settled that the Winnipeg team will get their spring training at Minneapolis.

Enough estimation of the sum which will be expended putting the major league players of the Thistle in condition for the championship race in the National and American league plays the amount at $100,000.

President Murphy, of Chicago, announced that the salary of the Mayor of Chicago will positively not be met. King is already the highest salaried catcher in the profession.

Winnipeg's manager has not yet been able to induce Larry Piper to sign his contract. He was the last time runner and runner on the Maroon team last year, and a fair hitter.

This is said to be the salary list of the eight American League clubs: Cleveland $100,000, Boston $75,000, New York $65,000, Chicago $60,000, Detroit $50,000, St. Louis $35,000, Washington $25,000, and Philadelphia $40,000.

McMahon, the tall pitcher and first baseman, who came from Cambridge, Mass. for a try-out with the Winnipeg Maroons, and then went to Killarney, was taken out for a trial with the Boston Americans.

The $100 salary limit is causing trouble with the Copper Country Indians. All last year's players are looking for an increase and with liberal advances to the new comers, managers are having all sorts of fun to keep the club within the league requirements.

Eacher McGuire of the New York Americans is forty years of age this year and has been playing ball twenty-three years. He batted .289 in 1906. The last season he was with Washington he batted .350 of the 149 games played.

Dutch has already signed two pitchers, and measure better than six feet, close to 200 pounds.

It is freely predicted that the American League will have a new batting leader this year, as no batters have ever led the league in batting. George Stinson and Napoleon Lajoie have each married since the close of last season.

Henry Davis, "Big" Clark, Elmer Flick, Ben Crawford and Willis Knicker, the evergreen backstop, are signed as likely winners.
